
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The authors would like to thank the numerous U.S. and Chinese individuals interviewed in the course of this research. To promote candor and for reasons of privacy, all must remain anonymous. They are identified in this report only with general titles, such as “pro-democracy activist,” “Falungong practitioner,” “Western businessperson,” or “PRC official.” Moreover, in preparing this study, we were sensitive to the concerns of our interlocutors that its publication might reveal information that could compromise their efforts or perhaps even endanger individuals who reside in China or who travel frequently to the PRC. To protect our sources and others, some material considered particularly sensitive by our contacts was omitted from this report.

We also wish to extend our thanks to Professor David M. Lampton of The Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS) and our RAND colleagues Robert Anderson and Nina Hachigian for reviewing this report prior to publication. Any errors or omissions are, of course, entirely the responsibility of the authors.