¹The Internet is a highly fluid information environment, with new web sites constantly appearing and old ones constantly disappearing. It is difficult to keep pace with these changes, and in the case of the web sites of Chinese dissident organizations, it is even more challenging, for several reasons. Chief among them is that many groups change their web addresses frequently in order to thwart attempts by the authorities to block access to them. Web sites also become defunct when groups disband or no longer have the resources to maintain their online presence. When this list was compiled in January 2002, all of the links were working, unless otherwise noted. Of course, by the time of publication, it is possible that some links will have become outdated.

²Chinese-only web sites are identified here with a (C), English-only websites with an (E), German-only web sites with a (G), French-only web sites with an (F), and Tibetan-only web sites with a (T). The URLs of multilingual websites are followed with a notation such as (C,E), (C,E,T), or (C,E,F). Languages that are not commonly used on Chinese dissident web sites, such as Hindi, for example, are noted by their full names. In some cases, the English versions of multilingual web sites do not contain all of the information available in Chinese.
