EXPERIENCE

RAND Corporation (June 2010 – Present)

Senior Management Scientist and Faculty Member of the Pardee-RAND Graduate School, RAND Corporation, Washington D.C, June 2010 – Present

Served as subject matter expert in multiple disciplines and research methodologies, highlighted by the following areas of expertise: human geography; organizational structure and design; organizational culture and behavior; military strategy; strategic planning and communications; management and leadership; military logistics; military acquisition; adult and continuing education; training; diversity; and ethnographic principal. Demonstrated exceptional research design expertise, with particular emphasis on policy analysis and business process improvement across a wide array of topics and research units. Effectively participated in and/or developed 35-plus projects valued at approximately $19 million with principal or co-principal investigator roles in projects valuing more $7 million and direct development of new project ideas valued at more than $6 million. Produced multiple deliverables that included: seminar facilitation; executive briefings, publications of varying sizes; official expert opinions and positions; and varying tools and process maps. Also produced several instruments on major ethnographic research efforts after having the questionnaires approved through Human Subjects Protocol Committees in RAND and the Department of Defense. Was selected to serve as Logistics Subject Matter Expert for RAND's efforts to assist developing nations in improving their infrastructures. Utilized my experience in leadership and organizational design to build a research team of more than 30-plus people that oversees expansive research portfolios each year – with a high of 12 projects in one year. Created several research design, client interface, and managerial systems to guide the team in the successful development and execution of varied complex projects with positive client feedback. Diligently and purposely sought opportunities to mentor junior researchers for their own personal growth and for the benefit of the organization.

The United States Army (May 1990 – July 2010)

Deputy Chief of Staff for Strategic Planning, G-5, U.S. Army Expeditionary Contracting Command, Fort Belvoir, Virginia, Lieutenant Colonel, March 2009 – July 2010

Created, established, and led the Command's first-ever directorate-level staff for strategic planning and communications over the following four lines of operation: strategic initiatives; commander's actions; protocol; and strategic communications. Supervised a 10-person staff sectioned into the following five divisions: the Strategic Initiatives Group that monitored internal and external events and operations to recommend strategic direction and communicate it to the workforce; the Commander's Action Group that conducted advanced analysis to resolve problems initiated from the executive agency of the Command; the Protocol Division to assist in the planning and execution of the Commanders directed events such as Commander's Conferences and Staff Rides; the Public Affairs Division to facilitate media engagements, press releases, podcasts, command products, and newsletters; and the Web Content Division that worked with the Web Presence Section of the Corporate Information Office to develop the content to be shared via web pages, knowledge sites, and other information-sharing venues. Provided speechwriting to develop and finalize speeches, presentations, and articles for the Commander and the executive agency to include text, graphics, and appropriate technical support, in coordination with the appropriate staff subject matter experts. Also provided trip planning and event coordination for the executive agency. Additionally served as an Internal Consultant Team to conduct "tiger team" process consultation and advanced problem solving using civilian and military problem-solving models. Expertly designed and conducted several studies ranging from tactical operations planning in support of the subordinate commands, to command-wide manpower analysis, to mission analysis in support of OPERATION UNIFIED RESPONSE for humanitarian relief efforts in Haiti.

Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics, G-4/Strategic Initiatives Group Director, G-5, U.S. Army Expeditionary Contracting Command, Fort Belvoir, Virginia, Lieutenant Colonel, February 2009 – March 2009

Logistics Officer and Senior Strategic Planner for the United States Army's newly formed contracting and procurement command responsible for more than 80% of the Army's contracting actions valued at over $104 billion, with more than 104 subordinate organizations deployed world-wide. Developed, organized, implemented, and supervised the logistics infrastructure of the general-officer- led organization into the following subdivisions: Supply and Program Management; Policy and Program Analysis; and Internal Management. Directly supervised the following major functional lines of operation: equipment and fleet readiness; property accountability; logistics operations quality assurance and program compliance; internal headquarters logistics activities; budgeting; transportation and mobilization; and overall asset visibility throughout the command. Served as lead strategic planner for the command responsible for projects including, but not limited to: the creating of award-garnering plans, policies, and procedures related to deployments, exercises and contingency operations; restructuring the command's authorization documents for improved operating efficiency and streamlining of government resources; development and dissemination of the command's story through multiple venues; and the creation and implementation of strategic problem-solving methods and corresponding briefing products to present resolutions. Also implemented a system of systems approach to problem-solving to resolve difficult issues using the military-decision-making model and civilian strategies with great successes for the command. As lead strategic planner, provided in-depth problem solving and planning for the Command Group through concept formulation, independent assessments, strategic analysis, and organizational studies. The Strategic Initiatives Group additionally provided speeches, presentations, articles for publication, and technical support for the Commanding General's travel, with noteworthy accomplishments including the following: planning and oversight of participation in a combatant command level multi-national exercise (PANAMAX 09) for deployment certification purposes as part of the command's campaign for full-operational-capability; numerous organizational design studies; and assessments on the command and support relationships between our command and the Army's newest combatant command - AFRICOM.

While Simultaneously Serving as:

Deputy and Acting Mission Operations Director, G-3, U.S. Army Expeditionary Contracting Command, Fort Belvoir, Virginia, Lieutenant Colonel, February 2009 – September 2009

Deputy and/or acting lead staff officer for a 35-plus person directorate comprised of the following divisions: Security and Intelligence (G-2); Plans, Training and Operations (G-3); Logistics (G-4); Contracting Quality Assurance; and Strategic Initiatives. Also co-served as the Plans and Operations officer for the Army Contracting Command. As part of a newly forming command, implemented systems to improve the processes and staff functions of each division, while undertaking several major initiatives such as developing a tasking and mission tracking for the command; forming a working group to synchronize operational contracting support requirements within the Department of Defense; and multiple staff realignments to improve upon the original operation and organization document that started the command. As one of the three major directorate level leaders, helped formulate policy to shape the future direction of the one-star flag officer command, with examples including formulation of the command's deployment concept of operations plan and its command-wide training plan; and development of several strategic management tools.

Battalion Commander, 296th Brigade Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade (Stryker) Brigade Combat Team, 2nd Infantry Division (Heavy), Lieutenant Colonel, June 2007 – February 2009

Commander of an 800-plus person logistics battalion in a 4300-person Stryker Brigade Combat Team resetting and preparing for combat operations as part of Operation Iraqi Freedom. Oversaw the battalion's subordinate units consisting of a headquarters company with a direct support field-feeding mission that operated two garrison dining facilities; a distribution company, with an award-winning multi-commodity warehouse activity, a 20-truck and trailer transportation section, an ammunition management section, and a fuel distribution and water production section; a 400-person maintenance company; and a medical company that staffed three health clinics and a dental clinic. Responsible for the equipment resetting and training for deployment of one of the Army's seven Stryker Brigade Combat Teams. Managed with award-winning results in Army Supply Excellence and Army Maintenance Excellence an internal management operation responsible for: human resources management, operations and intelligence, internal battalion logistics, civil affairs and media relations; communications, logistics support planning in support of a 5000 person brigade, and unit ministry functions. Oversaw the maintenance of a 1500-wheeled-vehicle fleet; a 500-plus line-item property book, and a combined operating budget of $2M.

Executive Officer to the Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff, G-4, Headquarters, Department of the Army, Pentagon, Lieutenant Colonel, October 2006 – June 2007

Principal aide/assistant to the two-star general officer Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff (ADCS), G-4 of the United States Army. Provided and supervised administrative support, including: preparing, reviewing, and/or processing incoming and outgoing staff products prepared by the Army G-4's 448 military, civilian, and contractor personnel requiring the approval or coordination of the ADCS, G-4 or the Deputy Chief of Staff, G-4. Maximized the ADCS, G-4's effectiveness in policy formulation and program development through time management systems; processing inbound and outbound correspondence; and providing support for presentations and official travel. Ensured his preparedness for Congressional and media engagements and executive and General Officer level Army, Joint, and Department of Defense meetings and presentations. Assisted the ADCS, G-4 in strategic decision-making on issues involving funding and supporting the war-fighter and the industrial, national, and multinational logistics infrastructure.

With Special Duty as:

Executive Officer to the Independent Review Group to Report on Rehabilitative Care And Administrative Processes at Walter Reed Army Medical Center and the National Naval Medical Center, The Office of the Secretary of Defense, Pentagon, Lieutenant Colonel, March 1, 2007 – April 30, 2007

Responsible for the design and oversight of the 25-person support staff of the nine-member distinguished panel commissioned by Secretary of Defense Donald Gates in response to the February 2006 Washington Post reports on conditions for wounded warriors at Walter Reed Army Medical Center. Created the positions within the staff's organizational design and interfaced with Washington Headquarters Services to contract for the appropriate hires to fill the positions. Created the daily operational schedule and established staff procedures, with direct oversight over the following functions: personnel, legal affairs, public affairs, budgeting and resourcing, meeting and event planning, social coordination, automation support, technical writing, graphics and reproductions, and travel. Conducted twice daily staff meetings to synchronize the efforts of the aforementioned staff functions. Ensured strict compliance to the mandates of the Federal Advisory Commissions Act. Also provided input as a technical writer and editor for the final report—which was published and distributed in an unprecedented shortened timeline.

Speechwriter, Office of the Chief of Staff of the Army (CSA), Pentagon, Major, September 2005 – October 2006

As a member of the personal staff of the 35th Chief of Staff of the United States Army (General Peter J. Schoomaker), performed the following functions: prepared scripted speeches and remarks; crafted General Officer messages and announcements for Army-wide dissemination; drafted personal correspondence for the CSA; management and automation support for the standard presentation and briefing products of the CSA; prepared holiday and periodic messages for media and military website and publication; monitored the themes and topics from the President of the United States and the Secretary of Defense to ensure the Chief's message was timely and nested with the highest levels of governmental control; researched myriad topics to ensure the Chief's communications were accurate and relevant; edited staff products and documents prepared by other Headquarters, Department of the Army level organizations for the CSA's signature and approval. Also coordinated travel and prepared trip books and read-aheads for National Capital Area and select distant travel, devising methods of packaging information for ease in processing. Reinforced the CSA's calendar manager for non-local travel. Prepared correspondence and/or messages for joint signing by the Secretary of the Army, the CSA, and the Sergeant Major of the Army. Provided writing and content expertise to Department of the Army level staff elements. Coordinated with several public affairs and media contacts on CSA publications. Also prepared Executive Summaries and internal staff messages to inform the CSA.

Battalion Executive Officer, 25th Brigade Support Battalion, 1st Brigade (Stryker) Brigade Combat Team), 25th Infantry Division (Light), Major, June 2004 – August 2005

Deputy Commander and Chief of Staff of a 700-plus person logistics battalion in a 4300-person Stryker Brigade Combat Team conducting combat operations as part of Operation Iraqi Freedom. Oversaw the battalion's subordinate units consisting of a headquarters company with a direct support field-feeding mission; a distribution company; a maintenance company; a medical company; and a temporarily attached combat engineer company. As chief of staff, directly supervised a 70-person staff responsible for: human resources management, operations and intelligence, internal battalion logistics, civil affairs and media relations; communications, logistics support planning in support of a 5000 person brigade, and unit ministry functions. Managed the maintenance of a 1500-wheeled-vehicle fleet; a 500-plus line-item property book, and a combined operating budget of $2M.
